

Tools You Can Use

David Suzuki Foundation

There is a lot of information on this site; here are a few that may help you with your Environment Week event: Contact your local media; Write to your political representatives; Download our community organizer toolkit; Keep yourself informed.

Hinterland Who's Who - Publicize Your Project

This site is geared to wildlife and has some great ideas to promote any event with the following information: contact a cable TV station, write a newsletter or newspaper article, start a bulletin board and hold a special media event.

Community Action Programs for the Environment \(CAPE\)

CAPE projects ultimately help Canadians to make better environmental choices and to adopt sustainable behaviours. Projects use a variety of approaches to reach their environmental objectives, including: campaigns to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and air pollution; local watershed projects; programs involving youth and educators; protecting species at risk; protecting against invasive alien species; and projects on Aboriginal lands. Eligible recipients may include environmental groups, community groups, service clubs, professional associations, educational institutions, youth and seniors' organizations, First Nations' and Aboriginal organizations and charitable and volunteer organizations.

EcoAction Calculator

Sign up for this online tool to calculate your energy, waste and water savings over time. Create a team and challenge your community or staff to generate savings. Create competitions between different neighbourhoods.

One Simple Act in Communities

Visit this site and get lots of ideas for presentations you can deliver in your community. Access the Tools You Can Use to develop and promote green initiatives.